

The CEE Stock Exchange Group

The CEE Stock Exchange Group comprises the stock exchanges of Vienna, Budapest, Ljubljana and Prague. The cornerstone of the Group was laid in 2004 when an Austrian banking consortium under the leadership of the exchange operating company, Wiener Börse AG, acquired a majority stake in the Budapest Stock Exchange. In 2008, majority stakes were acquired by the Vienna Stock Exchange in the neighboring stock exchanges of Ljubljana and Prague. Measured by market capitalization and equity turnover, the CEE Stock Exchange Group is the biggest player in the region of Central and Eastern Europe today.

Strategic goals of the CEE Stock Exchange Group

- As the leading exchange group in Central and Eastern Europe, it is the primary objective of the CEE Stock Exchange Group to strengthen the entire regional capital market and its individual member exchanges, advancing the development and international positioning of the Group. The Group's efforts are guided by the home market principle in all internal and external activities and all cooperation projects are carried out in the spirit of partnership.

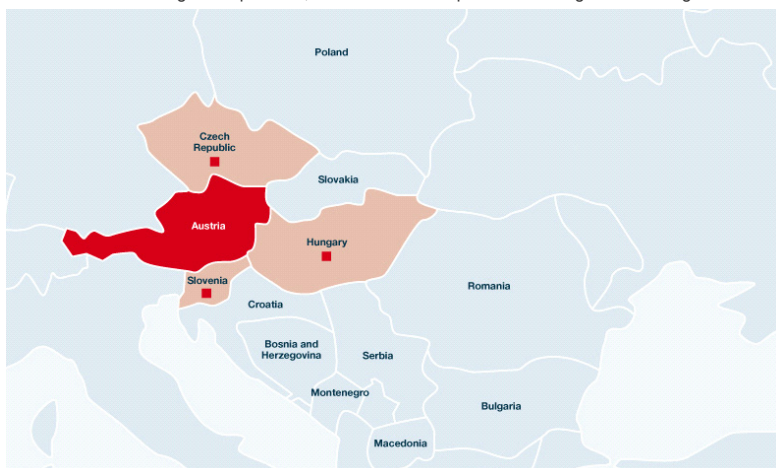

Planned measures

- In the medium to long term, the primary objective is to raise liquidity at all members of the Stock Exchange Group. In order to achieve this, there are plans to implement a uniform trading system, acquire more international trading members, and harmonize the clearing and settlement procedures.
- The projects that have already been – or will be - realized within relatively short periods include, on the one hand, the enlargement of the product range, e.g., introduction of new indices and structured products, and on the other, measures to attract the attention of international market participants such as through joint data vending. Additionally, the companies listed on the four stock exchanges started to present themselves to an international audience of investors at road shows that take them to all major financial centers of the world.
